Suggestion: QR Codes on Invoices

Megan Bond of Complete Transitions asked if SMMware invoices could include a 'QR code'. Customers would scan this code with their phone's camera, which would then open the payment website in their phone's web browser.

SMMware can in fact support this, although for now you will need a little help from us to put it in place. Just send us your QR code via email.

If this is a popular enough request, we'll revise the Settings Editor for the Invoice Signature to let you handle it on your own.

We appreciate user suggestions as they are a big part of how SMMware can get better.

Pay by Venmo? Scan this QR code:

Please pay invoice upon receipt. Late fees of 1.5% per month or 18% per year will be charge for payments received greater than 15 days from the date of invoice.

If you are not familiar with them, QR codes are a kind of bar code, meant to be read by a computer.

Hours Entries: Presets for Description

Now, when you click on a preset for the descriptions of hours entries, the new preset is added to the existing description instead of replacing it.

There have been occasional requests for this change over time, and we decided it would be appropriate to put in place.

The Return of 'History Of Hourly Rates'

At the bottom of a given Associate Profile, a History of Hourly Rates has been brought back in a slightly different form.

It now lists the Pay Levels that the associate has been paid at, and for each pay level breaks out a sub-list of rates the Associate has been paid for that Pay Level. For each rate, it shows the last date the rate was paid, and the total number of hours that rate was paid.

If you don't enter custom pay rates for hourly entries, the result will be very simple and much the same as the previous History.

But if you follow more complex rules and enter custom pay rates for various hourly entries, while the result will also be more complex, it will provide the clearest picture of what rates you have paid in the past.

In Progress

Currently, our main focus is to create new versions of our YouTube videos to reflect new or changed features, and on a number of smaller requests from you, our subscribers.

Thanks, and stay safe.
